The Girl From Cash Register No. 1

The Girl From Cash Register No. 1

After finishing her studies in literature, Claudia works as a cashier at the supermarket. She is happy with her life and counts her co-workers among her best friends. The only thing missing is love, but now that her secret high school crush Martin has returned, Claudia's hopes are ignited. Martin was in America, where his attempts to make it as a professional singer failed. Now broke, he is forced to sing his old hits in dreary shopping malls to make ends meet.

After one of his mall gigs, Claudia works up the courage to tell him she still feels attracted to him. Martin reacts with ice-cold arrogance, as if he, the big superstar, is just too good for her.

At a publishing company's celebration Martin tells the director that he is taking time off to write his own biography - to cover up his failure as a pop star. The director is very interested and wants to know what he has already written. Martin sees his chance for a comeback but has no idea how to write a book.

Then he thinks of Claudia, who would be more than willing to help him. After the director reads the first excerpts, he is enthusiastic. One evening Claudia takes Martin home. Martin sings a song just for her and Claudia's heart melts. To impress Claudia, Martin invites her to a luxury hotel. There, Martin's boast of being a regular guest is exposed as a lie. Filled with rage, he cruelly insults Claudia - who angrily breaks off all contact with him. Even when he begs for her forgiveness, she refuses to listen. The only thing she wants is to finish the biography.

As the deadline for the book draws near, Claudia's mind suddenly shuts down and she can no longer write. However, after Martin finally confesses his love for her and the two spend a passionate night together, her writer's block disappears.

But when the book is formally presented, Claudia is shocked to discover that she has not been credited. Feeling betrayed, she once again cuts Martin completely out of her life, this time for good!
