Trapped

Leon Bischoff works as a pastry chef at a hotel that is preparing to host an international energy conference. While working late putting the finishing touches on a birthday cake for his 15-year-old daughter Romy, Leon meets the attractive Katja, who works for the Russian Ministry of International Affairs and is the closest confidant of the Russian Minister of Energy.

The next day, while Leon waits for his daughter's arrival by train, a man suddenly flashes a newspaper's front page in his face. It's a picture of him and his daughter under the bold headline: "Assassin commits suicide! Daughter in good health!" Before he can react, the man has disappeared and Romy arrives. Desperately needing to understand the bizarre news, the still-dazed Leon takes Romy to an amusement park... where she is kidnapped!

He is then contacted and forced to make a terrible choice - either he poisons the dessert meant for the Russian minister, or his daughter will be killed! With a heavy heart, Leon executes the murderous plan. After escaping the tightly secured hotel, Leon is ordered back to the amusement park. There he is told at gunpoint that to save the life of his daughter he must now sacrifice his own...

Leon immediately becomes the main suspect, with only the criminal profiler Schreiber doubting his guilt. At the very last moment Schreiber is able to prevent Leon's suicide, but just as the pastry chef declares that he's willing to surrender to the police, Schreiber is shot directly before his eyes. Back to being a lone fugitive, hunted by both the police and his daughter's kidnappers, Leon's only thought is to rescue Romy...
